DETAILED ACTION

Acknowledgment

1. Acknowledgment is made that applicant's Amendment, filed on 08 September 2003, has been entered. Upon entrance of the Amendment, claims 44-48 were added. Claims 1-48 are now pending in the current application with claims 13-23 and 33-43 withdrawn from consideration.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- 2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
  - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 3. Claims 1-12, 24-32 and 44-48 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sonoda (JP 10-254001) and Takano (US 5,790,578 A). Sonoda teaches a semiconductor laser module Drawing 1 comprising a semiconductor laser element 10 which emits laser light 11; an optical wavelength selection element 14 which selects a first portion of said laser light having a predetermined wavelength in order to feed back said first portion of said laser light to said semiconductor laser element 10; and an optical wavelength conversion element 15 which includes an optical waveguide

Art Unit: 2828

18, receives a second portion of said laser light in said optical waveguide 18, and converts said second portion of said laser light to wavelength-converted laser light 19 having a converted wavelength. Sonoda fails to teach that the type of semiconductor laser element. Takano teaches a semiconductor laser element Fig. 8A comprises a multiple-quantum-well active layer 35-37 including a plurality of quantum-well sublayers 35.37 each having a thickness and a composition, where one of the plurality of quantum-well sublayers 35 is different from another of the plurality of quantum-well sublayers 37 in at least one of the thickness and the composition. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the semiconductor laser element of Takano in the semiconductor laser module of Sonoda, since Sonoda teaches the use of any semiconductor laser element and Takano teaches a semiconductor laser element with advantages over conventional semiconductor laser element. Also it has been held to be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select a known material on the basis of its suitability for the intended use as a matter of obvious design choice. In re Leshin, 125 USPQ 416.

Regarding claim 2, Sonoda discloses said optical wavelength selection element is a transparent-type optical wavelength selection element arranged between said semiconductor laser element and said optical wavelength conversion element, and selects said first portion of said laser light after said laser light is reflected by an end facet of said optical wavelength conversion element, see [0052], [0071] and [0092].

Regarding claim 3, Sonoda discloses an optical splitting unit 82 which splits a third portion of said laser light from said second portion of said laser light which is received by said optical wavelength conversion element 15, and a reflection unit 85 which reflects said third portion of said laser light in order to feed back said third portion of said laser light to said semiconductor laser element 10, and said optical wavelength selection element 14 is a transparent-type optical wavelength selection element arranged in an optical path of said third portion of said laser light between said reflection unit 85 and said semiconductor laser element 10, see Drawing 7.

Regarding claim 4, Sonoda discloses said optical wavelength selection element is a thin-film narrow-band -pass filter formed on a surface of said reflection unit, see [0095].

Regarding claim 5, Sonoda discloses a reflection unit which reflects a third portion of said laser light after said third portion of said laser light propagates through said optical wavelength conversion element, in order to feed back said third portion of said laser light to said semiconductor laser element, and said optical wavelength selection element is a transparent-type optical wavelength selection element arranged in an optical path of said third portion of said laser light between said reflection unit and said semiconductor laser element, see Drawing 8.

Regarding claim 6, Sonoda discloses said optical wavelength selection element is a thin-film narrow-band -pass filter formed on a surface of said reflection unit, see [0095].

Art Unit: 2828

Regarding claim 7, Sonoda discloses an optical system which separates said wavelength-converted laser light from said third portion of said laser light, see Drawing9.

Regarding claim 8, Sonoda discloses a reflection unit which reflects a third portion of said laser light which is emitted from said semiconductor laser element in a direction opposite to a direction toward said optical wavelength conversion element, in order to feed back said third portion of said laser light to said semiconductor laser element, and said optical wavelength selection element is a transparent-type optical wavelength selection element arranged in an optical path of said third portion of said laser light between said reflection unit and said semiconductor laser element, see Drawing 9.

Regarding claim 9, Sonoda discloses said optical wavelength selection element is a thin-film narrow- band-pass filter formed on a surface of said reflection unit, see [0095].

Regarding claim 10, Sonoda discloses said optical wavelength selection element is a narrow-band-pass filter, see [0052].

Regarding claim 11, Sonoda discloses said narrow -band-pass filter is realized by a thin-film band-pass filter, see [0084].

Regarding claim 12, Sonoda discloses said thin-film band-pass filter is formed on a light-exit end facet of said semiconductor laser element from which said laser light is emitted, see Drawing 11.

Art Unit: 2828

Regarding claim 24, Sonoda discloses said semiconductor laser element is coupled to an end facet of said optical wavelength conversion element, see Drawings 1, 7, 9 and 11.

Regarding claim 25, Sonoda discloses said optical wavelength conversion element further comprises, a substrate made of a ferroelectric crystal exhibiting a nonlinear optical effect, where said optical waveguide is extends along a surface of said substrate, and a plurality of domain-inverted portions periodically formed along said optical waveguide, where a direction of spontaneous polarization is inverted in said plurality of domain-inverted portions, and said optical wavelength conversion element converts said second portion of said laser light to said wavelength converted laser light when said second portion of said laser light propagates in said optical waveguide, see [0052]-[0055].

Regarding claim 26, Sonoda discloses said direction of said spontaneous polarization is inclined at an angle relative to said surface of said substrate, in a plane perpendicular to a direction in which said optical waveguide extends, where said angle is greater than 0 degrees and smaller than 90 degrees, see abstract, [0019] and [0056]-[0058].

Regarding claims 27-29, Sonoda discloses all the stated limitations, see the rejections to the combination corresponding of claims above.

Regarding claims 30-32, Sonoda discloses a semiconductor laser module comprising: a semiconductor laser element which has a light-exit end facet, and emits laser light through said light-exit end facet; an optical wavelength conversion element which comprises an optical waveguide and an end facet, receives a first portion of said laser light having a predetermined wavelength in said optical waveguide, and converts said first portion of said laser light to wavelength-converted laser light having a converted wavelength, where said semiconductor laser element is coupled to said end facet of said optical wavelength conversion element through a reflection-type thin-film narrow-band-pass filter; and said reflection-type thin-film narrowband-pass filter which is sandwiched between said end facet of said optical wavelength conversion element and said light-exit end facet of said semiconductor laser element, and selectively reflects a second portion of said laser light having said predetermined wavelength in order to feed back said second portion of said laser light to said semiconductor laser element; said optical wavelength conversion element further comprises, a substrate made of a ferroelectric crystal exhibiting a nonlinear optical effect, where said optical waveguide is extends along a surface of said substrate, and a plurality of domain-inverted portions periodically formed along said optical waveguide, where a direction of spontaneous polarization is inverted in said plurality of domain-inverted portions, and said optical wavelength conversion element converts said first portion of said laser light to said wavelength converted laser light when said first portion of said laser light propagates in said optical waveguide; and said direction of said spontaneous polarization is inclined at an angle relative to said surface of said substrate, in a plane perpendicular to a direction in which said optical waveguide extends, where said angle is greater than 0 degrees and smaller than 90 degrees, see Drawing 13, [claim 19] and see the rejections to the combination corresponding of claims above.

Regarding claims 44, 45, 47 and 48, Takano teach all the stated limitations, see col. 7, lines 1-64.

Regarding claim 46, it has been held to be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select a known material on the basis of its suitability for the intended use as a matter of obvious design choice. In re Leshin, 125 USPQ 416.

Response to Arguments

- 4. Applicant's arguments filed 08 September 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argued the following:
- a. "Sonoda does not teach or suggest the claimed semiconductor laser element comprising a MQW active layer ...".
- b. "There would be no advantage to combining such a structure with Sonoda, since the wavelength selection mechanism in Takano would render the laser incompatible with Sonoda".
- c. "[B]oth Takano and the present invention disclose a multiple quantum well structure having different band-gap energies, Takano is addressing a different problem than the present invention."

Examiner replies to Applicant's arguments are as follows:

a. In response to applicant's arguments against the references individually, one cannot show nonobviousness by attacking references individually where the rejections are based on combinations of references. See In re Keller, 642 F.2d 413, 208 USPQ 871 (CCPA 1981); In re Merck & Co., 800 F.2d 1091, 231 USPQ 375 (Fed. Cir. 1986).

Application/Control Number: 09/840,025 Page 9

Art Unit: 2828

- b. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the semiconductor laser element of Takano in the semiconductor laser module of Sonoda, since Sonoda teaches the use of any semiconductor laser element and Takano teaches a semiconductor laser element with advantages over conventional semiconductor laser element.
- c. The fact that applicant has recognized another advantage which would flow naturally from following the suggestion of the prior art cannot be the basis for patentability when the differences would otherwise be obvious. See Ex parte Obiaya, 227 USPQ 58, 60 (Bd. Pat. App. & Inter. 1985).

Conclusion

5. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any
